

Privacy Policy

Pride Marketing Solutions, Inc (PMS) takes our user privacy very seriously. Further, we believe that all uses of your private information should be openly disclosed. As a result, below is our user privacy policy:

- We disclose our privacy policies and procedures in this document and will make it available to all who request it.
- We will not provide personally identifiable information to other parties. Nor, shall we provide such information to parties deemed not to have the user's best interests at heart. We also will not sell, rent or donate any personal information to any third parties.
- We allow users to opt out at any time from receiving e-mail messages from PMS and Promise Magazine and/or business partners and from having demographic information shared with PMS sponsors and/or business partners.
- Any billing, credit card, or bank account information is only accessible through our accounts payable departments and is not shared with any other persons and or staff.

Since this policy may change over time as we modify and/or expand our service, we suggest you check back periodically to understand how we treat your information. If we decide to change our privacy policy we will post the new policy online. Your continued use of Promise Magazine Online www.promisemag.com constitutes your agreement to this policy. Continued use of Promise Magazine Online after any posted policy changes, constitutes your agreement to any such changes.

